OTHER LEGAL PROCEEDINGS

The Panel is not aware of any other legal proceedings which are pending or decided and which relate to the disputed domain name.

IDENTIFICATION OF RIGHTS

The Complainant has established that it owns the International trademark for BOURSORAMA number 3009973, registered on February 22, 2000.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The Complainant is a French company engaged in the business of online brokerage, financial information on the internet and online banking. Through its website at www.boursorama.com it is the first national financial and economic information site and the first French online banking platform.

The Complainant owns several domain names such as <boursorama.com> registered on March 1, 1998 and <bourso.com> registered on January 11, 2000, which it uses in its business.

It also owns several domain names such as <boursorama.com> registered on March 1, 1998 and <bourso.com> registered on January 11, 2000, which it uses in its business.

The Respondent registered the disputed domain name <group-bourso.com> on November 4, 2023.

The Complainant is concerned that the disputed domain name has been registered, that in creating it the Respondent has embodied the entirety of the BOURSO mark and that it has been used it for a fake banking site with the obvious potential for improper use.

Accordingly, the Complainant has filed this Complaint to have the domain name transferred to the Complainant.

PARTIES CONTENTIONS

A. COMPLAINANT

The disputed domain name is confusingly similar to the BOURSO Trademark in which the Complainant has rights. In creating the disputed domain name, the Respondent has embodied in it the entirety of the BOURSO mark.

The Respondent has added to the trademark by way of a prefix, the generic word “group”, which gives the impression that the domain name is an official domain name of the Complainant that relates to the corporate group of the Complainant.

The Respondent has no rights or legitimate interests in the disputed domain name. Initially, the Complainant has to make out a prima facie case on this issue and if it is made out, the Respondent must then establish that it has such a right or legitimate interest.

The Respondent has no rights or legitimate interests in respect of the disputed domain name as the Respondent is not commonly known by the domain name, is not affiliated with or authorised by the Complainant in any way, has no business with the Complainant and has no licence nor authorisation to use the Complainant’s trademark or to register the domain name.

The Respondent has caused the disputed domain name to resolve to a website which purports to offer banking services under the name Group Bourso. This is an infringement of the Complainant’s BOURSO mark. Group Borso also appears to be a fake entity and the address on the resolving website is fictitious.

The disputed domain name was registered and is being used by the Respondent in bad faith. That is because it includes the well-known and distinctive BOURSO trademark, the Respondent must have registered the disputed domain name with full knowledge of the mark and it must have done so by taking advantage of the Complainant’s reputation in the mark.

In the unlikely event that the Respondent is offering genuine banking services, it is doing so by using the disputed domain name, which is conduct that in itself is bad faith. Moreover, such a use is calculated to give rise to confusion, which further demonstrates bad faith registration and use.

Thus, the Complainant maintains that the Respondent has registered and used the disputed domain name in bad faith.

B. RESPONDENT

The Respondent did not file a Response in this proceeding.

RIGHTS

The Complainant has, to the satisfaction of the Panel, shown the disputed domain name is identical or confusingly similar to a trademark or service mark in which the Complainant has rights (within the meaning of paragraph 4(a)(i) of the Policy).

NO RIGHTS OR LEGITIMATE INTERESTS

The Complainant has, to the satisfaction of the Panel, shown the Respondent to have no rights or legitimate interests in respect of the disputed domain name (within the meaning of paragraph 4(a)(ii) of the Policy).

BAD FAITH

The Complainant has, to the satisfaction of the Panel, shown the disputed domain name has been registered and is being used in bad faith (within the meaning of paragraph 4(a)(iii) of the Policy).

PROCEDURAL FACTORS

The Panel is satisfied that all procedural requirements under UDRP were met and there is no other reason why it would be inappropriate to provide a decision.

PRINCIPAL REASONS FOR THE DECISION

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

This is a mandatory administrative proceeding pursuant to Paragraph 4 of the Uniform Domain Name Dispute Resolution Policy (the “Policy” or “UDRP”) of the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (“ICANN”), the Rules for Uniform Domain Name Dispute Resolution Policy (the “Rules”), and the CAC Supplemental Rules.

A. Administrative compliance

By notification dated November 9, 2023, and in accordance with paragraph 4 (b) of the Rules, the CAC notified the Complainant that the Complaint was administratively deficient in that the Complaint did not provide the name of the Respondent (domain-name holder) and all information (including any postal and e-mail addresses and telephone and fax numbers) known to Complainant regarding how to contact Respondent or any representative of Respondent, including contact information based on pre-complaint dealings, in sufficient detail to allow the CAC to send the Complaint as described in Paragraph 2(a) [Rules, Paragraph 3(b)(v)]. The notification invited the Complainant to have regard to the Registrar’s verification available in the online case file in the form of a non-standard communication regarding the appropriate identification of the domain name holder. On November 9, 2023, the Complainant filed an Amended Complaint and the CAC determined also on November 9, 2023 that the Complaint should be admitted to proceed further in the Administrative Proceeding.

The Panel has reviewed all of the above matters and makes a finding that within the meaning of paragraph 4(b) of the Rules, the administrative deficiencies have been corrected and that this matter has proceeded properly to the Panel in accordance with the Policy and the Rules.

B. Substantive matters

Paragraph 15 of the Rules provides that the Panel is to decide the complaint on the basis of the statements and documents submitted and in accordance with the Policy, the Rules and any rules and principles of law that it deems applicable. In that regard, the Panel also notes that the onus is on the complainant to make out its case and past UDRP panels have consistently said that a complainant must show that all three elements of the Policy have been made out before any order can be made to transfer a domain name.

The Panel therefore turns to discuss the various issues that arise for decision on the facts as they are known.

For the complainant to succeed it must prove, within the meaning of paragraph 4(a) of the Policy, that:

- (i) The domain name is identical or confusingly similar to a trademark or service mark in which the complainant has rights; and
- (ii) The respondent has no rights or legitimate interests in respect of the domain name; and
- (iii) The domain name has been registered and is being used in bad faith.

The Panel will therefore deal with each of these requirements in turn.

Identical or Confusingly Similar

The Complainant has adduced evidence that the Panel accepts, namely Annex 2 to the Complaint, that the Complaint is the registered owner of the International trademark for BOURSO No. 3009973 registered on February 22, 2000 (“the BOURSO trademark.”).

It will be seen therefore that the trademark was registered well before the disputed domain name was registered, which was on November 4, 2023, as is demonstrated by Annex 4 to the Complaint. The Complainant has verified that the Respondent is the registrant of the disputed domain name.

The Panel next finds that the disputed domain name is confusingly similar to the BOURSO trademark for the following reasons.

First, the domain name includes the entirety of the BOURSO trademark. Accordingly, it is clear that the domain name has been inspired by and is an attempt to copy the BOURSO trademark. It is also clear and has been held many times in prior UDRP decisions that when internet users see an entire trademark used in a domain name in this way, they naturally conclude that the domain name is an official domain name of the trademark owner, in the present case the Complainant. Secondly, the domain name also includes, as a prefix to the trademark, the generic word “group” and a hyphen. It is well established that a generic word cannot negate a finding of confusing similarity that is otherwise established, as it is in the present case. The word “group” would be interpreted by internet users to mean the corporate group of which the Complainant is the principal constituent. Likewise, features such as a hyphen cannot alter the meaning of the domain name. Internet users who see the entire domain name would therefore naturally conclude that the entire domain name is related to the Complainant’s corporate group and that the Complainant had authorised the domain name and the inclusion in it of the BOURSO trademark, none of which is true. In this particular case, internet users would also conclude that the domain name was owned by a person or entity that was entitled to assert that it was related to the Boursorama bank, the name under which the Complainant conducts its extensive online banking business. Internet users would also conclude that the entire domain name would lead to an official website of the Complainant, which is also not true.

Finally, the “.com” suffix is disregarded for the purposes of assessing confusing similarity, as it could not negate the clear impression that the domain name is confusingly similar to the trademark, which it clearly is.

The Panel therefore finds that the disputed domain name is confusingly similar to the BOURSO trademark and that this conclusion is supported by the prior UDRP decisions cited by the Complainant.

The Complainant has thus made out the first of the three elements that it must establish.

Rights or Legitimate Interests

Under paragraph 4(a)(ii) of the Policy, the Complainant has the burden of establishing that the Respondent has no rights or legitimate interests in respect of the disputed domain name.

But by virtue of paragraph 4(c) of the Policy, it is open to a respondent to establish its rights or legitimate interests in a domain name, among other circumstances, by showing any of the following elements:

- (i) before any notice to you [respondent] of the dispute, your use of, or demonstrable preparations to use, the domain name or a name corresponding to the domain name in connection with a bona fide offering of goods or services; or
- (ii) you [respondent] (as an individual, business, or other organization) have been commonly known by the domain name, even if you have acquired no trademark or service mark rights; or
- (iii) you [respondent] are making a legitimate noncommercial or fair use of the domain name, without intent for commercial gain to misleadingly divert consumers or to tarnish the trademark or service mark at issue.

Thus, if a respondent proves any of these elements or indeed anything else that shows that it has a right or legitimate interest in the domain name, the complainant will have failed to discharge its onus and the complaint will fail.

It is also well-established that a complainant is required to make out a prima facie case that the respondent lacks rights or legitimate interests and that when such a prima facie case is made, the respondent carries the burden of demonstrating rights or legitimate interests in the domain name. If the respondent cannot or does not do so, a complainant is deemed to have satisfied paragraph 4(a)(ii) of the Policy.

The Panel, after considering all of the evidence in the Complaint, finds that the Complainant has made out a prima facie case that the Respondent has no rights or legitimate interests in the disputed domain name.

That prima facie case is made out from the following considerations.

- The Complainant has clearly established its rights in the BOURSO mark.
- The evidence of the Complainant is that the Respondent is not related in any way to the Complainant’s business, is not affiliated with the Complainant or authorized by it in any way to use the BOURSO trademark and does not carry out any activity for, nor has any business with, the Complainant.
- The evidence shows that the Respondent is not commonly known by the domain name within the meaning of paragraph 4(c)(ii) of the Policy.
- The evidence is that no licence nor authorisation has been granted by the Complainant to the Respondent to make any use of its trademark or to register the disputed domain name.
- The evidence shows, that the Respondent’s website at <group-bourso.com> purports to offer banking services under the business name Group Bourso, which is displayed prominently in the upper-left hand corner of the site. The homepage also features links to a variety of banking related services, including what are described as “Checking & Savings,” “Loans,” “Credit Cards,” and “Investing.” The Complainant adds, and the Panel agrees, that Group Borso appears to be a fake entity, as the Complainant has established by its Annex 5. Moreover, on the website, the Respondent purports to be located in Boulogne-Billancourt, France, but an internet search shows that the office address on the website is fictitious, as the Complainant has demonstrated by its Annex 6. This evidence shows, as the Complainant rightly submits, that such use of the disputed domain name by the Respondent for a financial-related website is a serious infringement of the Complainant’s BOURSO registered mark and, as it is dishonest and false, could not conceivably give rise to a right or legitimate interest in the disputed domain name.
- Thus, it can be inferred that the Respondent registered the disputed domain name for an improper motive, such as to try to sell it or use it dishonestly to make money or for some other illegitimate purpose.
- None of this conduct is bona fide or legitimate and none of it comes within any of the criteria for a right or legitimate interest in a domain name that are set out in paragraph 4(c) (i) – (iii) of the Policy. Nor is there any evidence to show that the Respondent could in any other way show a right or legitimate interest in the domain name.

These facts give rise to the prima facie case made out by the Complainant.

The Respondent has not filed a Response or made any other answer to the claims of the Complainant and is in default. Accordingly, the prima facie case has not been rebutted and the Complainant has made out the second of the three elements that it must establish.

Registered and Used in Bad Faith

The Complainant must prove on the balance of probabilities both that the disputed domain name was registered in bad faith and that it is being used in bad faith. Paragraph 4(b) of the Policy sets out four circumstances, any one of which is evidence of the registration and use of a domain name in bad faith, although other circumstances may also be relied on, as the four circumstances are not exclusive.

The four specified circumstances are:

- (i) circumstances indicating that the respondent has registered or acquired the domain name primarily for the purpose of selling, renting, or otherwise transferring the domain name registration to the complainant who is the owner of the trademark or service mark or to a competitor of that complainant, for valuable consideration in excess of the respondent's documented out-of-pocket costs directly related to the domain name; or
- (ii) the respondent has registered the domain name in order to prevent the owner of the trademark or service mark from reflecting the mark in a corresponding domain name, provided that the respondent has engaged in a pattern of such conduct; or
- (iii) the respondent has registered the domain name primarily for the purpose of disrupting the business of a competitor; or
- (iv) by using the domain name, the respondent has intentionally attempted to attract, for commercial gain, Internet users to the respondent's website or other on-line location, by creating a likelihood of confusion with the complainant's mark as to the source, sponsorship, affiliation, or endorsement of the respondent's website or location or of a product or service on the site or location.

The evidence shows that the conduct of the Respondent in registering the domain name clearly amounts to bad faith registration and that its conduct since the registration, by using it to pretend that it is associated with the Complainant, purporting to offer banking services and operating a fake banking website under the imprimatur of the Complainant, clearly amounts to bad faith use.

That is so for the following reasons.

First, the Respondent must have been aware of the existence of the Complainant and its prominent reputation when it registered the disputed domain name, because the Respondent chose the name of the domain name itself and then made an addition to it by adding the prefix "group" in the domain name to suggest that it was part of that group or entitled to say that it was, none of which was true. Thus, the Respondent had actual knowledge of the Complainant and its trademark, which has long been a ground for finding bad faith registration and, by using the domain name in the way that the Respondent has used it, its use of the domain name. The Panel therefore finds that the Respondent chose the Complainant's trademark, included it in the domain name and registered and used the domain name to invoke the Complainant and its group for an improper purpose and therefore in bad faith.

Secondly, the conduct of the Respondent brings the case within the provisions of paragraph 4(b)(i) of the Policy, as the most likely explanation for registering the domain name and using it was probably with the intention of selling it and forcing the Complainant to buy it.

Thirdly, the same considerations bring the case within the provisions of paragraph 4(b)(iii) of the Policy, because the intention and effect of registering and using the disputed domain name was to disrupt the Complainant's business.

Fourthly, the same conduct of the Respondent leads to the conclusion that the Respondent, in registering the domain name deceptively and without any authority to do so, must have intended to create a likelihood of confusion, with the intention of attracting current and potential customers of the Complainant looking for its services and doing so in this misleading manner. Thus, the matter comes within the provisions of paragraph 4(b)(iv) of the Policy.

Fifthly, there is no conceivable ground for concluding that the Respondent was acting in good faith, as the Respondent was clearly targeting the Complainant.

Sixthly, the Complainant is also correct in submitting that in the unlikely event that the Respondent is offering genuine banking services, it is doing so deceptively by using the disputed domain name as it has done, which is in itself bad faith.

Finally, in addition to the specific grounds of bad faith set out in the Policy and having regard to the totality of the evidence, the Panel finds that, in view of the Respondent's registration of the disputed domain name using the BOURSO mark and using it in the manner described, it registered and used it in bad faith within the generally accepted meaning of that expression.

As the Complainant also rightly submits, such conduct of the Respondent has been held by many previous UDRP panels to constitute bad faith registration and use.

Accordingly, the Complainant has shown the third of the three elements that it must establish and is entitled to the relief that it seeks.
